Dear Susan Goodenow:

Our organization has been a pro-family group in Massachusetts for over 16 years. There is a great deal of concern, and frankly outrage, over the Boston Red Sox's promotion of the "It Gets Better" website and its associated website "The Trevor Project."

Perhaps you did not sufficiently look into these before you got involved with them. The "It Gets Better" project bills itself as an anti-bullying and anti-suicide effort. But in fact it does practically nothing legitimate in that regard, and instead serves as a conduit for kids to extremely objectionable and outrageous homosexual activism.

I present some examples below. Please excuse the x-rated language, which unfortunately is necessary to properly inform you.

The founder and central figure of the "It Gets Better" project is Dan Savage, a homosexual activist with a history of vile and disgusting statements and actions directed at well-known conservatives, and other pornographic writings.

For example:

- Savage set up a website to obscenely attack US Sen. Rick Santorum using the most disgusting homosexual imagery. As you enter the website, on the "splash" screen Savage calls Santorum "the byproduct of anal sex." Savage is conducting an ongoing Internet campaign to tie Santorum's name to anal sex.
- He set up a website to obscenely attack Pastor Rick Warren of Saddleback Church. He "re-defined" the church's name using anal sex descriptions. Savage went on to suggest that engaging in anal sex is what Pastor Warren actually does "in private" and also what Christian teens involved with his church do when practicing abstinence. He describes this and more in a most sickening manner.
- Savage has published obscene attacks on us Rep. Michele Bachmann and her husband. He writes that "Michele Bachmann's never met a ranting, raving anti-gay bigot that she wouldn't crawl into bed with." Savage calls her husband a "Queen for a Day" and a "bigot", and makes reference to "eating feces" in his rant against him. In addition, Savage celebrated an attack inside Rep. Bachmann's husband's office by homosexual activists.

- Savage wrote about inserting a "Scott Brown action figure" into someone's rectum or vagina. (This was part of a larger discussion Savage was having about using an Oscar statuette as a sex toy.)
- Savage said of Republicans while on a television talk show on HBO, "I wish they were all f---ing dead."
- In 2000, Savage pretended he was a conservative and volunteered for Gary Bauer's presidential campaign. Savage wrote that while he was sick with the flu he went into Bauer's office and licked the doorknobs and Bauer's desk implements to try to make Bauer ill.
- He writes a very raunchy, even pornographic, on-line sex column, often aimed at teenagers. In one entry, Savage advises a homosexual teenager who complains that his boyfriend does not give him the kind of anal sex he desires to "seek a partner who meets your needs" because "you're far too young to settle" for second-rate sex. In another column, he publishes a story of a heterosexual couple's anal sex adventures in a quaint B&B, where they upset the management with their noise and the filthy sheets they left behind. Another example: A young man describes his all-expense-paid trip to Paris to be a sex slave in a BDSM "dungeon." Savage seems to especially enjoy publishing letters about teenagers and depraved sex.

We can certainly supply you with a more complete and unedited version of this and more if you wish. All of this is quite well known. It's easily available on the Internet with a few Google searches. We've posted much of it on our website MassResistance.org.

Neither Dan Savage nor anyone else closely associated with "It Gets Better" appears to have any legitimate qualifications for working with kids, and certainly not for dealing with the behavioral and psychological issues surrounding suicide. They are simply homosexual activists. The real victims are the vulnerable kids who come to them for help.

But possibly even more disturbing is "The Trevor Project," which the Red Sox video specifically leads kids to. It is purportedly a website of "resources" for kids to go to for "crisis intervention."

These "resources" tend to be homosexual activist organizations and other materials intended to normalize homosexuality, transgenderism, sadomasochism, and other extremely destructive behaviors in the minds of troubled kids. These are clearly designed by homosexual activists, not any kind of legitimate medical professionals.

Here is a sample of what The Trevor Project lists for troubled youth to read:

- "Puppy Love" - Described by reviewer as "perhaps the world's first gay BDSM coming-of-age novel." [sadomasochism]

- "Rainbow Boys" - Story of first homosexual love in high school, and getting into the cool crowd.
- "Band Fags" - Boys discover it's OK to be gay in high school. Described as "an exhilarating novel about lust and love."
- "A Question of Manhood" - Being gay helps 16-year-old "find a way toward becoming the man he wants to be."
- "Desert Sons" - Story about steamy teenage homosexual love and sex.
- "The God Box" - Teenage Christian boys find a new interpretation of Bible passages to justify their homosexual love affair.

More books from The Trevor Project's reading list:

"Dance on My Grave" - Homosexual love story of two 16-year-old boys.

"My Side of the Story" - A 16-year-old who goes to gay bars.

"Dream Boy" - Love affair between two high school boys.

"Bare Me Safely" - Homosexual sex in a band; teenaged boy with a penchant for picking up older men.

"M or F?" - Coming out as 'gay' in high school.

"A Better Place" - Football player falls in love with unathletic boy.

"The Blue Lawn" - "Emotionally charged" story of love between two 15-year-old boys."

"The Hookup Artist" - Boy goes from liking girls to liking boys.

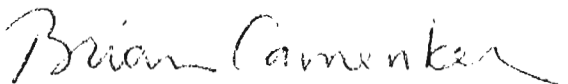

"Rainbow High" - Homosexual love on sports teams.

"Getting It" - Homosexual love story of 15-year-old boys.

And there's much more that I haven't included. But suffice it to say that this is not anything that the Boston Red Sox should be involved with in any capacity whatsoever. As more parents find out that this is where the Red Sox organization is directing troubled kids, I am sure that this will be -- to say the least -- a public relations disaster.

I would urge you to immediately remove the video, disassociate yourself with this entire sordid "project," and issue an apology to the public. Please feel free to contact me if you would like to discuss this further.

Sincerely,

Brian Camenker
President
